A Tom cat and his bride are seen driving away with a sign on the back of their coach reading "Just Married." The carriage conveying them to their home is driven by three mice. Mrs. Cat has daisy frills which she is plucking the petals, then to make sure they love each other they kiss. They leave the carriage when arriving at their destination and dance into their new home. Cupid Mouse, coming out of a heart shaped hole in a nearby tree, shoots an arrow into the love nest and then hastily departs. Within Tommy Cat is seated at the table yelling "Hooray" as Mrs. Cat enters with a plate of biscuits. She places them on the table and leaves to get to get the remainder of the food. Tommy then tries the biscuits. Finding them very hard and unable to pierce them with his fork, which he breaks in the attempt, throws it out the window. It rolls over a cliff, hits a mule and knocks him out. Not succeeding any better with the second biscuit, Tommy throws that one out too. This one knocks a lamp post over. In due time the remainder of the biscuits are thrown away and prove equally as disastrous. Wife enters with a second plate of the sinkers. Using both fork and knife Tommy puts a biscuit on each end and makes a pair of dumbbells. The bride seeing this begins to cry then seeing a flatiron on the floor, picks it up and throws it at him. He is knocked out, figuratively and literally. He is thrown into the top of a tree and then lands, still doing calisthenics. The dumbbells are still in his hand. He walks to a cafe where he stops and takes a bottle and some glasses out of his pockets, saying "Goodbye Forever." He enters the cafe, dances a bit then drinks some beer. During this procedure a stork is seen flying through the air. On coming to Tommy Cat's home he drops a bundle into the chimney. The stork then calls Tommy on the phone and tells him the good news. The proud father shouts "Hooray" and runs home as fast as his legs can carry him. On arrival a kitten comes out to meet him followed by his mother. Tommy is very happy but almost collapses when he sees a flock of kittens in the doorway. The moral is "It is the little things in life that count".
